CHIANG GROUP 'MAKES FINAL' BID FOR PEACE

Failure Of Mission To Reds
Will Result In Open War
Observers Believe

NANKING, Jan. 9.—American sources were informed today that the Chinese government is planning a new and final attempt to persuade Communists to join a coalition government and end China's civil war.

It was indicated the nationalists within the next few weeks will send Chang Chun, governor of Szechuan province, to Red headquarters at Yenan to make the last bid for peace.

Failure of this mission almost certainly will result in open civil war, dissolution of executive "peace" headquarters and withdrawal of all American combat troops from China.

This sobering development in China came as Gen. George C. Marshall winged his way back to the United States and his new job as secretary of State.

Marshall Reaction Unknown
Official Chinese reaction to Marshall's departure from China is not expected to be made known for several days.

Only this morning Communist spokesmen at Nanking set forth what appears to be the Communist attitude to the government's final peace overtures.

Spokesmen said the Communists still insist on dissolution of the national assembly, drafting of a new constitution and return of all territory seized by nationalists since last Jan. 13.

These conditions are so stringent that it is considered they virtually amount to an open declaration of war.

Communists Confident

Communists seem surprisingly confident that they can achieve battle successes in the near future which will cause the government to meet their terms more than half way.

On the other hand, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek has expressed the belief repeatedly in recent months that he can wipe out the Communist military forces in nine months.

These factors would tend to neutralize statements about peace made by both parties recently. They also strengthen the view that

Brazilian Declares U. S. and Brazil Made War Plans In 1939

BY RICHARD DYER
INS Staff Correspondent

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 9.—A former war minister of Brazil declared today that the United States and Brazil had laid plans to go to war against the Axis on the side of Britain before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Manuel Cesar de Goes Monteiro, in an interview with the newspaper O'Globo, said that Secretary of State Gen. George C. Marshall, then U. S. chief of staff, told him in 1939 that:

"The United States is planning to enter the war beside England."

The former war minister asserted that Marshall asked for and received Brazilian assistance.

Goes Monteiro said he pledged Brazilian help and returned to the United States with Gen. Marshall, who had visited Rio de Janeiro, to confer with the late President Roosevelt.

In these conversations, he was quoted as saying "we laid the basis for U. S.-Brazilian wartime cooperation long before Pearl Harbor."

After telling his interviewer that "I do hope I am not giving away any secret," Goes Monteiro said:

"The Marshall visit to Brazil resulted from negotiations of the then minister (of foreign affairs) Oswaldo Aranha and Roosevelt in Washington in that sombre moment when a world war was inevitable."

"I do not want to be the first to reveal the secret of the decisive step in North American history because I am responsible for the Brazilian side of the military cooperation of the two nations."

The all-powerful atom is foremost once again in foreign news today as the United Nations security council reconvenes at Lake Success.

When the council meets at 3 p. m. for its second session of the new year the United States will continue its efforts to persuade that body that priority consideration should be given to the report of the atomic energy commission.

Half a world away, the renowned British physicist and atom expert, Professor Marcus Oliphant, said in Canberra, Australia, that the United States has a relative lack of interest in peaceful use of atomic power since the nation already possesses huge oil and hydroelectric resources.

Professor Oliphant seemed to think that because of this there might be a delay in industrial use of such energy. Pointing out that Britain and Australia were most interested in its industrial use, he said that if the same energy were devoted to peaceful as for military use, atom power stations could be put into operation within five years.

U. S. FILES NEW PROTEST ON POLAND'S ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The United States filed a new protest with the Polish government today charging that pre-election terrorism violates a solemn international agreement among the United States, Russia, Great Britain and the Polish governments.

The protest was delivered to the Polish foreign office by Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane at 6:15 a. m. (EST). It raised a definite legal point and the United States believed ready to exercise some political or economic sanction if no result is obtained.

NINE INDICTED BY GRAND JURY TO FACE TRIAL

Charges Against Nine Other
Persons Ignored; One
Case Continued

Nine men indicted by the Pickaway county grand jury Thursday were awaiting arraignment before Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff. County Prosecutor Kenneth Robbins said he was unable to state when the arraignment will take place but that it will probably be early next week.

The nine men were named in 14 indictments returned Wednesday afternoon at the conclusion of a three-day grand jury session during which, the report says, the 15 jurors reviewed the evidence in 24 criminal cases and examined 64 witnesses. Charges against nine other persons were ignored, the jury report says, and one case—that of a man accused of abandonment of a woman in delicate condition—was continued until the next grand jury session.

Orin Diltz, 24, and George Clifton, 25, both of Route 4, Circleville, were jointly indicted on charges of burglarizing the American Legion club, 136 East Main street, last Nov. 9 when $1,700 cash was stolen.

Clifton was also indicted on a charge of stealing $300 cash in a burglary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, 217 North Court street, last Oct. 12. Both men are accused of other thefts in Circleville.

A total of five indictments were returned against Diltz, a World War II hero, and four against Clifton.

Indictments against Diltz include grand larceny in the looting of the automobile of Vaden Couch, grand larceny of property belonging to James Owen Webb, and

DR. KOO SAYS MARSHALL DID WELL IN CHINA

CLEVELAND, Jan. 9.—Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador to the U. S., declared today that America's Gen. George Marshall had succeeded to a great extent in his mission to the far eastern country.

Dr. Koo made this statement in a news conference in Cleveland, where he will participate tonight in the opening of the 21st annual institute of the council on world affairs.

"The important factor of Gen. Marshall's mission," the Chinese statesman said, "is that the party in power in China has made concessions and met demands of other opposition parties, especially the Communists."

Dr. Koo, one of China's outstanding diplomats, would offer no criticism to the forthright statement made by Gen. Marshall as he left China for the United States where he will become America's first secretary of state to be chosen from the military ranks.

OSU Professors Report One-Fourth Food Wasted

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—The present great waste of food products between the farmer and the consumer indicates need for a sharp revision of standard methods of conveying that food to the consumer.

Two members of the Ohio State University rural economics department pointed to that conclusion today in a publication of the Ohio agricultural experiment station.

The authors of the report are Prof. Charles W. Hauck and W. I. Lenox.

They declared that "about one-fourth of the food we produce never is converted into human nourishment but is discarded or wasted somewhere along the line."

The waste, they said, occurs at every point along the way, from the farm to the homes and restaurants.

The agricultural economists stated:

"Losses of perishable items extending to the article, exceed those on staple goods, so it would be expected that wastes on fresh fruits and vegetables may be even higher than one-fourth."

"In view of the world scarcity of food, these figures are unusually staggering and provocative. They call for a challenging re-examination of existing practices at all points to determine wherein these contribute to waste needlessly, and which of them may be effectively modified and improved."

Hauck and Lenox reported that improper wholesale and retail practices, such as delays, rough handling and unfavorable atmospheric conditions, account for much of the losses among perishables.

Studies of pre-packaging of six common vegetables in five Ohio cities showed a reduction from normal retail waste of 17 per cent to less than two per cent, according to the article.

FOREMEN CASES TO BE HELD UP

Moratorium Declared By NLRB Until Supreme Court Decides Issue

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The national labor relations board declared a moratorium on foreman's cases today until the supreme court decides whether supervisory workers are entitled to join unions and bargain collectively under the Wagner act.

A statement from the NLRB said the new policy will be put into effect during the next 24 hours. The board's action was taken as the supreme court heard arguments in the Packard case which generally is regarded as a test case to determine whether the Wagner act covers supervisory employees.

The NLRB statement said: "Final judicial determination of this issue is deeply desired by the board. The NLRB has unanimously determined out of respect for the court and in view of the great public interest in the question not to conduct any new hearing or render any further decision in foreman's cases until the supreme court has spoken."

"The moratorium will be complete except that in a few instances regional offices may be permitted to finish hearings already opened or to conduct elections heretofore directed by the board. This policy will be put into effect during the next 24 hours."

WALLACE SLAMS CHURCHILL IN 'NEW REPUBLIC'

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Henry A. Wallace sharply attacked Winston Churchill today for a "crusade" he claims the former British prime minister is leading.

Writing the magazine New Republic, of which he is editor, Wallace said:

"This crusade, fantastic though it may be, has great danger for the American people."

"It consists of an attempt by Winston Churchill to create an Anglo-American alliance whose main purpose would be to encircle Soviet Russia, compelling her to do her bidding and holding up before her the alternative of a war—a war in which America's atom bomb would be the final resource of the Anglo-American crusaders."

49 REPORTED KILLED IN BATTLE IN GREEK HILLS

Pro-Labor Senators To Fight Closed Shop Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Pro-labor senate liberals swung into a series of separate meetings with labor leaders today in preparation for a fight against the anti-closed shop bill and other "stringent" points in the Republican program.

The liberal group conferred with CIO President Philip Murray at a "hush-hush" private dinner in Murray's hotel suite last night.

AFL President William Green, who rejected a senate invitation to sit down jointly with Murray, will be host to the pro-labor senators at a similar strategy meeting in a few days. One invited senator said it would be held "next week" in advance of the impending senate labor hearings.

Sen. Murray (D) Mont., now ranking minority member of the labor committee, declared in an interview that he and his colleagues wanted to "sit down with the labor leaders and work out a reasonable program."

The senator was unsuccessful in getting Green to act in concert with the CIO president. The

"I'd like to see an effort on the part of labor leaders themselves to study these problems and see if it's not possible to make recommendations and seek some solutions."

Murray said he imagined that such Republican labor advocates as Sens. Aiken of Vermont and Morse of Oregon would be counted in on the consultations with labor's own bosses.

'BABY-SITTER' IMPRISONED FOR KILLING HIS CHARGE

Shifflet pleaded guilty in Media courthouse to charges that he caused the death of little Larry Mack last Nov. 17. He said he was acting as a "baby-sitter" and that the child's crying annoyed him.

GOP LEADERS PLAN TO REDUCE U. S. EXPENSES

Knutson Claims Congress
Will Approve Budget

TAX CUTS ARE PLANNED

Republicans Say They Will
Ignore President's Plea
For Present Taxes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., chairman of the tax-writing house ways and means committee, served notice on President Truman today in advance of his budget message tomorrow that congress intends to force a further reduction in government expenditures.

Knutson declared that if the President submits to congress a $37,000,000,000 budget, as has been reported, "we'll cut it to $29,000,000,000."

Similar sentiments were voiced by Rep. Taber (R) N. Y., chairman of the house appropriations committee. Knutson and Taber will meet shortly after the budget has been received with their opposites in the senate, along with other members of the four committees, to set the limit on government expenditures.

Budget Due Feb. 15
The reorganization act provides that the joint group shall report back to congress by Feb. 15 its recommendation for a federal budget for the 1948 fiscal year beginning July 1.

Knutson flatly predicted also that "we will cut taxes" despite the President's recommendations, twice made to congress this week, that "it would be unsound fiscal policy to reduce taxes." The Republican leader commented:

Tax Reduction Urged
"I cannot agree with the president's conclusions. Tax reduction will give a further impetus to business and will mean increased revenue."

Sentiment among Republicans in the senate, however, was to go slow on tax reductions until a clearer picture is given of the entire fiscal situation. Sen. Byrd (D) Va., a leading advocate of government economy, agreed with the President that taxes should not be reduced.

Rent Control Favored
Meanwhile, there was strong support in congress for accepting Mr. Truman's recommendation for extension of rent controls beyond June 30, when they otherwise would expire. Rep. Wolcott (R) Mich., chairman of the house banking and currency committee, warned that removal of rent controls would bring "chaos" as long as the housing shortage existed.

Indications were that the President's request for immediate action on "non-partisan housing legislation" would not be met. Wolcott said he opposed certain provisions of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill, which passed only the senate last year, despite the President's recommendation that it be enacted into law.

FIRM RUSSIAN DEALINGS SEEN

Marshall To Be Patient But

BY WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The world will learn shortly that Gen. George C. Marshall, new secretary of state, will deal patiently but firmly, frankly but understandingly with Russia in the coming negotiations for German and Austrian peace treaties.

Friends disclosed today that Gen. Marshall was one of the greatest friends Russia had throughout the second world war. It was Marshall who insisted upon sending American munitions and supplies to Russia in belief that it was imperative to keep Stalin's armies strong in order to crush Germany.

On one occasion, Marshall boasted that this aid to Russia saved between 500,000 and 700,000 American troops.

Marshall, a professional soldier, desires world peace above any other diplomatic goal. He has asserted that Premier Stalin seeks the same goal, though naturally on Russian terms.

Two strong wills are bound to clash when these two men meet at the peace table.

Throughout the war, Marshall time and again disclosed a keen insight into Russian character. He met Stalin several times and dealt with him face to face in the Tehran conference.

On one occasion at Teheran, Marshall openly argued with Stalin. It was over methods of (Continued on Page Two)

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The British ministry of labor warned 15,000 striking truck drivers today of government intervention against the walkout which has halted distribution of foodstuffs in the London area.

The ministry declared in a statement: "His majesty's government will not countenance any attempt to secure forcible rates and conditions by unconstitutional means."

With thousands of housewives travelling to the suburbs in an effort to find food to buy, the ministry urged the striking truckmen to return to work and permit "a fair and impartial hearing of your claims."

GOP LEADERS PLAN TO REDUCE U. S. EXPENSES

Knutson Claims Congress
Will Approve Budget
Of $29,000,000,000

TAX CUTS ARE PLANNED

Republicans Say They Will
Ignore President's Plea
For Present Taxes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., chairman of the tax-writing house ways and means committee, served notice on President Truman today in advance of his budget message tomorrow that congress intends to force a further reduction in government expenditures.

Knutson declared that if the President submits to congress a $37,000,000,000 budget, as has been reported, "we'll cut it to $29,000,000,000."

Similar sentiments were voiced by Rep. Taber (R) N. Y., chairman of the house appropriations committee. Knutson and Taber will meet shortly after the budget has been received with their opposites in the senate, along with other members of the four committees, to set the limit on government expenditures.

Budget Due Feb. 15

The reorganization act provides that the joint group shall report back to congress by Feb. 15 its recommendation for a federal budget for the 1948 fiscal year beginning July 1.

Knutson flatly predicted also that "we will cut taxes" despite the President's recommendations, twice made to congress this week, that "it would be unwise fiscal policy to reduce taxes." The Republican leader commented:

Tax Reduction Urged

"I cannot agree with the president's conclusions. Tax reduction will give a further impetus to business and will mean increased revenue."

Sentiment among Republicans in the senate, however, was to go slow on tax reductions until a clearer picture is given of the entire fiscal situation. Sen. Byrd (D) Va., a leading advocate of government economy, agreed with the President that taxes should not be reduced.

Rent Control Favored

Meanwhile, there was strong support in congress for accepting Mr. Truman's recommendation for extension of rent controls beyond June 30, when they otherwise would expire. Rep. Wolcott (R) Mich., chairman of the house banking and currency committee, warned that removal of rent controls would bring "chaos" as long as the housing shortage existed.

Indications were that the President's request for immediate action on "non-partisan housing legislation" would not be met. Wolcott said he opposed certain provisions of the Wagner-Elender-Taft housing bill, which passed only the senate last year, despite the President's recommendation that it be enacted into law.

POTATOES SELL FOR $2 POUND IN LONDON NOW

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Potatoes—two dollars a pound.

That is what patrons of the London black market were paying today as a consequence of the trucking strike.

With legitimate trade channels blocked by the walkout, black marketeers were reaping a golden harvest.

Italian cauliflowers a week old fetched $1, French lettuce 50 cents.

The regular food stores were plastered with notices advising that their shelves were empty.

HAD SUGAR STAMPS

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—A Chicago man was questioned by FBI agents at Columbus today in connection with a "large quantity" of counterfeit sugar ration stamps found on his person. The man, booked as Yence M. Bridgforth, was nabbed as he stepped from a plane at the Columbus airport. FBI agents refused to discuss the case, pending questioning of Bridgforth.

as industry pressed its fight against the unionization of foremen before the supreme court and in the new Republican-controlled congress.

Attorneys for the Packard Motor Car company urged the high tribunal to reverse a lower court ruling granting collective bargaining privileges of the Wagner act to the firm's more than 1,000 supervisors.

At the same time, industry generally gave its endorsement to new legislation in congress designed to specifically exclude foremen from provisions of the Wagner act.

The legislators may act before the supreme court decision is handed down. The Packard case presents the controversial foremen's issue to the high court for the first time.

In its brief, Packard cited previous congressional action in support of its contention that foremen are "the front line of management" and should not be permitted to bargain collectively in labor organizations.

conducting amphibious warfare. Here is how Marshall described that argument:

"We disagreed when Stalin tried to tell me how to conduct amphibious operations. I told him that he knew all about land operations but that all of his operations were on roads, rivers or railroads. I told him that he knew nothing about crossing oceans."

"Stalin replied that some of his rivers were pretty wide and I told him that we had no trouble crossing rivers and that even the widest Russian river was not an ocean. I told him that a defeat on a river crossing was only a reverse but a defeat on an amphibious operation was a catastrophe."

On one occasion, when the Army was worried about how to handle "goldbrickers", who faked illness to escape combat service, Marshall exploded:

"Stalin had the answer to that. I told Stalin that Russian victories were due to the heroic conduct of the great Russian heroes. Stalin said, no, that was not why Russia won victories. He said the real reason was that there are no cowards in Russia. He said that in Russia, people were not trying to get into the top strata—they try like hell to stay out of the bottom strata."

conducting amphibious warfare. Here is how Marshall described that argument:

"We disagreed when Stalin tried to tell me how to conduct amphibious operations. I told him that he knew all about land operations but that all of his operations were on roads, rivers or railroads. I told him that he knew nothing about crossing oceans.
"Stalin replied that some of his rivers were pretty wide and I told him that we had no trouble crossing rivers and that even the widest Russian river was not an ocean. I told him that a defeat on a river crossing was only a reverse but a defeat on an amphibious operation was a catastrophe."

On one occasion, when the Army was worried about how to handle "goldbrickers," who faked illness to escape combat service, Marshall exploded:
"Stalin had the answer to that. I told Stalin that Russian victories were due to the heroic conduct of the great Russian heroes. Stalin said, no, that was not why Russia won victories. He said the real reason was that there are no cowards in Russia. He said that in Russia, people were not trying to get into the top strata—they try like hell to stay out of the bottom strata."

LISTENERS TELL WHY RADIO ADS ARE DISLIKED

Singing Commercials, Goody Claims Scored By Many Who Hear Programs

BY RUBY JUSTER
(Distributed By INS)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—Everyone from Times Square to Hollywood and Vine has decried radio for its evil ways in thrusting upon a "defenseless" public the prattlings of copy writers who dream up clever ways of selling nickel soda pop (now seven cents).

The criticism is noisy, but not, it seems, a clearcut expression of public opinion. Not 99 and 44/100 per cent of the listening public as might be suspected by the loud protest, but about a third of the radio audience is anti-advertising. At the outset, let it be known this column is not a defense of the inane singing commercials and the goody advertisements that guarantee long life and a happy marriage for smoking a certain cigarette. Neither this writer nor the listening public (see below) approve of such misbehavior.

As a Massachusetts woman said, "they claim too much for their product and it is so silly to think that by using their products is the only way for a woman to get a man." Of course not; there are other ways.

The woman was one interviewed by the University of Denver's national opinion research center on a survey on radio, analyzed by Paul F. Lazarsfeld and Harry Field in the book, "The People Look at Radio."

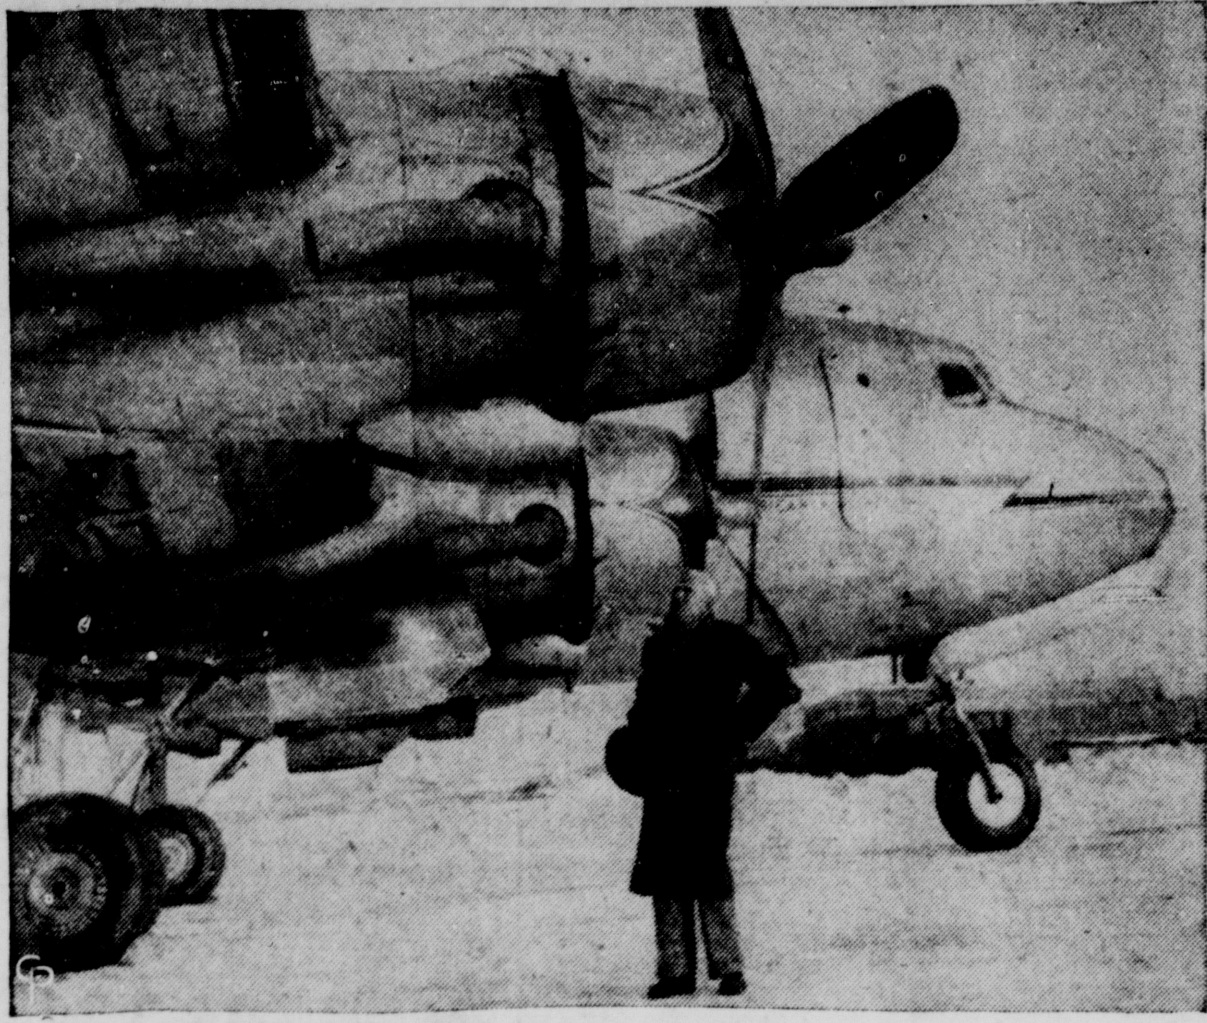

The survey discovered the other sixty some-odd per cent are "in favor of" or "don't particularly mind" advertising on the radio.

Those who find commercials bothersome object for these major reasons: (1) Too many, too long, and they come just about in the place where the narrator is going to tell whodunit; (2) Boring; (3) Advertisers claim their products have the power of gods; (4) Sometimes they say things offensive to certain morals; (5) Attention-getting devices, like singing commercials, are unpleasant to some listeners.

Radio is beginning to show signs of changing its ways. Beginning on January 26, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company will sponsor a new series of musical dramatic shows, called "The Greatest Story Ever Told," over ABC. The sponsor will foot all the bills, as is customary, but not a word will be said about his product on the air. Nothing more than mention of the sponsor's name.

Some gears used on trains are made of sheets of canvas welded together with glue under high pressure.

HERBERT WILL SIGN NEW FUND BILL FOR OHIO

Legislature Defers Signing Measures Until New GOP Governor Takes Over

BY ROBERT VINCENT
INS Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—The Ohio legislature is saving for incoming Gov. Thomas J. Herbert the honor of signing into law the first bill passed by the 97th general assembly.

The measure is the $109,000,000 partial appropriations bill, which completed its legislative passage yesterday without a vote having been cast against it in either the house or senate.

Although the big money bill must be signed into law before the approximately 20,000 state workers can receive their January 15 paychecks, legislature leaders deferred until a skeleton session Monday at 10:30 a. m., the enrolling and signing of the bill.

After they sign the measure it will be sent to the governor—but by that time it will be after 11 o'clock and the governor will be Herbert, not Democratic governor Frank J. Lausche.

There is no danger of delay in the paychecks of workers, however. They are all prepared and can be distributed the instant the bill is signed by Herbert and filed with Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel.

The house passed the bill and the emergency clause making it immediately effective by a unanimous, 127-to-0 vote after the finance committee had approved it in a brief, 16-minute session.

No changes were made in the bill as it was received from the senate, and there were no amendments offered on the floor, in fact, there was no debate on the measure in either house, despite the fact that it totals 30 per cent more than the partial bill of 1945.

The bill provides $10,500,000 for local governments and continues school and university payments at the same level prevailing in the last half of 1946. It also continues the present pay scales for state workers, which average 26 per cent above 1943.

The bill is the only one the leaders permitted to be introduced the first "week," which lasted just three days. A veritable flood of bills—actually hundreds of them—is expected to overflow the legislative hopper next week when the bars are let down.

House Majority Leader Paul McCormick (R-Logan) announced to the members that Herbert will deliver his legislative message and recommendations to a joint session on Monday, Jan. 20. It will not, however, be the new governor's first contact with his overwhelmingly Republican legislature, since the members are to be his guests at an informal buffet after the inauguration Monday.

FINAL REPORT SHOWS 1600 JAPS DIED IN QUAKE

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 9.—A final official summary of casualties in Japan's recent earthquake and tidal waves showed today that 1,600 Japanese were killed, 1,600 more were injured and more than 150,000 left homeless.

A U. S. Eighth Army report called the quake a "major disaster" but pointed out that most of the damage was caused by tidal waves and fires. One fire destroyed 60 per cent of the city of Shingu.

The report emphasized that not a single member of Allied occupation forces lost his life or was seriously injured, and that only minor damage occurred at some military installations in Koshi and Takamatsu prefectures (provinces).

Speedy rescue, relief and repair tasks were carried out by Americans, British and Japanese agencies. Excepting some roadbeds and bridges, all communications were quickly repaired, even in the hardest hit prefectures.

HEMMING SAID FORMER INMATE OF 2 HOSPITALS

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—Robert Haine Hemming, 42-year-old ex-convict charged with kidnapping an Ohio State University professor's coed daughter, was revealed today as a former patient at two Ohio insanity institutions.

Franklin County Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett reported Hemming failed to suffer from "feeble-mindedness and paranoia" in 1927 and was an inmate of the Columbus state hospital and the Lima state hospital for criminal insane.

Hemming faces grand jury action next week on kidnapping charges in connection with the two-day disappearance from home of Mary Virginia Kimberly, 20, who told Bartlett she was doped by Hemming.

Hemming, currently on parole from Folsom prison in California, also will be arraigned on several old charges of passing bad checks.

He had been visiting his parents in suburban Upper Arlington following his prison release and met Miss Kimberly, a friend of his daughter Sara, only once before the alleged kidnapping.

HERBERT WILL SIGN NEW FUND BILL FOR OHIO

Legislature Defers Signing Measures Until New GOP Governor Takes Over

BY ROBERT VINCENT
INS Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—The Ohio legislature is saving for incoming Gov. Thomas J. Herbert the honor of signing into law the first bill passed by the 97th general assembly.

The measure is the $109,000,000 partial appropriations bill, which completed its legislative passage yesterday without a vote having been cast against it in either the house or senate.

Although the big money bill must be signed into law before the approximately 20,000 state workers can receive their January 15 paychecks, legislature leaders deferred until a skeleton session Monday at 10:30 a. m., the enrolling and signing of the bill.

After they sign the measure it will be sent to the governor—but by that time it will be after 11 o'clock and the governor will be Herbert, not Democratic governor Frank J. Lausche.

There is no danger of delay in the paychecks of workers, however. They are all prepared and can be distributed the instant the bill is signed by Herbert and filed with Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel.

The house passed the bill and the emergency clause making it immediately effective by a unanimous, 127-to-0 vote after the finance committee had approved it in a brief, 16-minute session.

No changes were made in the bill as it was received from the senate, and there were no amendments offered on the floor, in fact, there was no debate on the measure in either house, despite the fact that it totals 30 per cent more than the partial bill of 1945.

The bill provides $10,500,000 for local governments and continues school and university payments at the same level prevailing in the last half of 1940. It also continues the present pay scales for state workers, which average 26 per cent above 1943.

The bill is the only one the legislature permitted to be introduced the first "week" which lasted just three days. A veritable flood of bills—actually hundreds of them—is expected to overflow the legislative hopper next week when the bars are let down.

House Majority Leader Paul McCormick (R-Logan) announced to the members that Herbert will deliver his legislative message and recommendations to a joint session on Monday, Jan. 20. It will not, however, be the new governor's first contact with legislature, since the members are to be his guests at an informal buffet after the inauguration Monday.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS
THE Founding Fathers wisely wrote into the Constitution a paragraph which lays it on the President to give, at intervals, a report to the Congress on the State of the Union. This was always an important duty, but in earlier days it took a long time for the citizenry as a whole to hear about it and to know what the President said. Today, thanks to wire services, newspapers and the radio, citizens who wish to do so can actually hear the President speak.
Those who heard President Truman on Jan. 6 were impressed by his certainty, a sureness within himself which was not there a year ago. They were also impressed by the quiet of the address, the lack of old-fashioned oratory. It was the statement of one responsible man to a group, equally responsible, who would have to work together for the next two years. The friendliness which greeted his statements was also noteworthy. If there was no wild and long-drawn-out applause, neither was there any visible or audible displeasure.
Most congressmen, if early interviews rightly represent them, go along with President Truman on most of his points. They wish he had gone farther along some lines, notably taxes, and not quite so far on others. On the whole, however, the feeling of working together was the main impression left with hearers. No two people agreed exactly. Certainly Republicans and Democrats cannot come together on all points. But the fewness of differences marked that day.
Can it persist? Probably not. But everyday folks wish it could. They think more could be done if less time and energy were wasted in vituperation.

OCEANIC ORIGINS
WHERE did the inhabitants of the Pacific islands come from? Thor Heyerdahl, a Norwegian, has a view contrary to the commonly accepted idea that they were Malays from the Asiatic continent. He thinks that they came from Peru, remnants of the tribes that ruled the country before the Inca conquest. He has now left Peru on a raft for the South Pacific to find evidence for his theory. In a previous visit he found Polynesian rock carvings that strongly resembled the Peruvian, and thought he detected language resemblances.
Culture resemblances are tricky things, even for a trained expert in the subject. Heyerdahl's idea would go counter to a widely held view that Peruvian civilization came from the Pacific islands. The prevailing winds are westerly, making navigation easy from Oceania to the shores of South America. If the pre-Incans really left Peru to seek their fortunes in the Pacific, they would find it hard sailing with their small boats against the winds.

Inside WASHINGTON
President Truman Has
"Employment" Problem
Plenty of Democrats
Looking for New Jobs
Special to Central Press
WASHINGTON—As though President Truman doesn't have enough trouble, he's got a "full employment" problem of his own. That is, he has to find jobs for the Democrats who find themselves on the outside looking in after the last election. And most senators and representatives, having been in the habit of telling the executive departments what to do and how to do it for years, don't want just any job. It has to be good.
So, almost every day, the president's calling list shows a few visitors who don't have "Rep." or "Sen." in front of their names much longer and who would like to have something else to put there.
That doesn't mean, of course, that all the Democrats who were not returned to office are looking for jobs. Many say they are not and mean it. But for men who spent their lives in politics, more politics, or at least government, is the logical thing.
Occupying the top spot on the list, according to most observers, is Senator James M. Mead of New York, who put his head on the New York gubernatorial chopping block for Tom Dewey and so is considered to have made the biggest sacrifice for the party. Mead is an old friend of the president, and the story goes that Mr. Truman would like to give him Robert Hannegan's job—postmaster-general and chairman of the Democratic National committee.
But Hannegan, while he would like to get rid of the committee post, because of ill health, among other things, wants to stay in the cabinet. And Mead is said to be almost insistent on cabinet rank. What may happen is the assignment of Mead as undersecretary of labor (Keen Johnson, who has the job, is anxious to go back to being vice president of Reynolds Metals). Then, conceivably, Lewis Schwellenbach, who hasn't been happy as secretary, would step out and Mead would step up. The only flaw in this picture is that Mr. Truman might have to find Schwellenbach another job before he stepped out. Schwellenbach, like Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, has his eye on a judgeship, preferably on the supreme court. Mr. Truman, it is plain, is confronted with a vicious circle.
There is also a chance that Mead will get an ambassadorship, if one can be found for which extreme wealth is not essential.
One ambassadorship which will be open is that to the Philippines, from which Paul McNutt is expected to resign this month. It has been turned down by Wisconsin Progressive Robert La Follette, whose name has come up in connection with many openings, but who may become the American member of the United Nations Economic and Social Council.
These are some of the other men for whom the political dopesters are busily finding spots: Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio, who saw the president recently but disclaimed interest in a federal appointment; Senator Hugh Mitchell of Washington; Senator Abe Murdock of Utah, another White House caller; Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, likewise; Enoch Axtell, who had White House backing in his unsuccessful Missouri race for Congress; Gov. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma; Senator James H. Huffman of Ohio; Attorney-general Robert Kenny of California, and Sen. James Tunnell of Delaware.
Want more? Rep. Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas of Illinois and Rep. Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse of Connecticut; Rep. Frank Hook of Michigan, who has been through this sort of thing before, having worked in the federal security agency the last time he was unseated; Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago; former Gov. Murray Van Wagoner of Michigan (he doesn't want anything); Sen. Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania (neither does he); James A. Farley, who doesn't want to return as chairman of the Democratic National committee, but who would like a job that might lead to the vice presidency.

ASSIGNMENT: AMERICA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—Final footnotes on the Bilbo fracas:
Now that it's all over, temporarily at least, a lot of sober, level-headed citizens about town whose love for Theodore G. Bilbo approximates their affection for a king cobra still are glad the man was not summarily booted out of the senate without having had a chance to speak his piece from the floor.
Their reasons are simple and well worth hearing.
They think it would have set a dangerous precedent for future perhaps high-handed barring of so-called "undesirable" senators from the land's most exclusive club.
They point out that, whatever the basic reasons behind the battle over Bilbo, it finally boiled down to a matter of political maneuvering and parliamentary expedient.
In other words, he finally could have been barred by the Republicans, simply and solely because they carried a majority. Which would mean that future senators could bar any single member of the minority party who happened at the moment to be under charges of some sort of misconduct—regardless of whether that member had been given public opportunity to defend himself!
It is all very well, in that regard, to point out that Bilbo was given opportunity to defend himself at the two special senate hearings which probed his activities. However, there is no denying that both of those committees could have conducted their hearings behind locked doors, had they so desired.
The fact that they were open hearings does not eliminate the possibility that if such committee reports can constitute basis for barring a senator, future senates might easily "investigate" and unseat a newly-elected member without the general public which elected him ever knowing on what grounds he was rejected.
Carry that possibility to its most unlikely extreme, and you can see where the majority party might eliminate its entire opposition in the highest legislative body in the land—and without publicly explaining a single reason why!
Unlikely? Yes. But still a dangerous precedent.
As the situation now stands, Mississippi's senior senator can return to defend himself from the senate floor—and you can rest assured that every newspaper and radio reporter in the gallery will see to it that his defense gets as much publicity as his prosecution.
Coincidentally, the strength of the nation's two-party system was demonstrated in an entirely different way during the temporary closing of the Bilbo case.
Although the newly-dominant Republicans led the fight against Bilbo, it was two Democrats who literally stole the show during the proceedings—Glen Taylor of Idaho and Alben Barkley of Kentucky.
It was Taylor who beat the Republicans to the punch in demanding that Bilbo be barred, thus preventing the battle from developing solely (did someone say "and sordidly?") along party lines. Even veteran senators who often have ridiculed the young westerner's brashness nodded approval of that particular move.

Brain Hemorrhage Is A Serious Hazard of Birth
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN M.D.
BIRTH presents a number of hazards, one of the gravest of which is brain hemorrhage. Just why such bleeding into the brain occurs, is not definitely known but it seems to develop most often in babies born before their time and in those instances where labor has been difficult.
If such a condition exists, it is of the utmost importance that it be recognized and treated promptly. The brain is not only the organ of the mind but also the great governor of all the body's physical activities and, hence, serious damage to the tissues of the brain may produce either mental or physical cripples. Proper treatment of brain hemorrhage in newborn babies may prevent much injury if it is instituted early enough.
Symptoms Often Vary
Unfortunately, the symptoms of this condition in tiny babies are not always clear-cut. Moreover they are varied both in kind and degree.
For instance, a baby with brain hemorrhage may be unconscious; on the other hand, it may seem only to be a little sleepier than is ordinary. In other instances the baby may be over-irritable, with twitching of the muscles or, even, convulsions. Sometimes the symptoms may resemble those of a stomach upset with a refusal to nurse and repeated attacks of vomiting.
Other symptoms are a weak and feeble cry; cyanosis, or bluish color of the skin; shallow, irregular breathing; restlessness and an anxious facial expression. Later on, the neck and spine appear fixed or rigid.
When these symptoms are present, of course, the physician will make a careful study to determine if brain hemorrhage has occurred. Sometimes it may be necessary to take a little fluid from the spine in order to confirm the diagnosis. As the baby grows older it may be found that he takes food with difficulty and does not gain weight satisfactorily. In some instances as soon as the condition occurs there may be fever and a slow pulse.
Different Treatment
A number of different measures of treatment have been suggested. Among the most important is the giving of injections of whole blood into a vein or a muscle. Sometimes it may be helpful to reduce the pressure within the brain by taking fluid from the spinal canal. The head of the bed should be raised, which will also help to reduce the pressure within the brain.
The use of sedatives, or quieting drugs may be required if the baby is over-irritable or has convulsions. Oxygen may be used to stimulate the breathing if it is necessary. Injections of vitamin K into a muscle also may be helpful but should not be relied upon alone to stop the bleeding. Of course, the baby's nutrition must be kept up with the proper food, preferably breast milk.
Early recognition and proper treatment of brain hemorrhage in the baby may not only help prevent crippling but also may be lifesaving.

JEAN CONTINUED: "But after you come back you ought to find something to do, Anne."
"Do I haven't time for all I have to do now?"
"I mean something that would fill your mind, not just housekeeping and answering telephone calls. If you could just get your mind off Philip."
"If there's anything that would get my mind off Philip, I wish I knew what it was."
"I don't know. But I know that your leaving the shop saved my life. As long as you were there I didn't think about my work. . . I just did it—like you wash dishes and make beds. But when you left me with no one but that brainless little finger-waver, I had to think—"
"You might take a vacation and let me run the shop."
"A doctor's wife running a beauty shop! It wouldn't do you any good anyhow. You'll have to think up something better than that."
"I suppose so."
Suddenly Jean said, "Here's a test to try on yourself, Anne. Do you wish you'd never known Philip?"
Anne said instantly, "No."
"But you were happier before."
"I know I was. Oh, Jean! Can you imagine it? . . . Our only problems were whether we'd put a rental library in one side, or get some more equipment and have another operator; and whether it would be better to get a new machine, or go in for the machineless waves."
"Well, I'm coming to my senses at long last. And you admitted that you wouldn't go back; so I guess we'll both pull through somehow."
"I didn't say I wouldn't go back."
"You said you didn't wish—"
"That I'd never seen Philip. And I don't, but I wish I'd never married him. You don't have to marry a person just because you love him."
Jean looked a little bewildered and Anne didn't wonder. She smiled back and stood up. "Well, I'll have to run along. Tell Philip I think he might manage to get home to dinner when I'm here."
"He'll be sorry to miss you."
"Yeah! I bet he'll be heart-broken."
They kissed lightly, casually, as though they had not shown each other their hearts, and Jean was gone, and Anne was alone again.
Mary's presence gave Anne's state of mind away to her parents. The very lessening of the strain she had been under left her a little off guard. "Mary! Don't try to climb a tree with that dress on!" She heard her own voice, shrill with irritation, as though it belonged to someone else. She saw her mother's look, commiserating, "I told you so," and her father's, surprised, reproachful.
Her face was hot as she got up from the swing and went across the lawn to where Mary was hanging undecided, from the lowest limb of an apple tree.
"I didn't mean to scream at you like that, Mary. I'm sorry. You don't want to spoil your dress. The tree will still be here in the morning when you have your slacks on."
Mary let go of the limb and took hold of Anne's hand as they started back to the house. Contact helped. When Mary was close to her, she loved her. When the child drew away from her and looked at her with Sheila's eyes—Anne broke the thought off sharply.

THIS is the time of the year when the old Romans pulled off their celebration called the Saturnalia. The Saturnalia would have made a modern New Year's Eve in a hot-shot night club seem like an afternoon tea at the manse.
At first the Saturnalia consisted of a one-day celebration but the Romans soon found 24 hours wasn't enough for all the boozing and banqueting on the agenda.
The Emperor Augustus expanded the holiday to three days enabling every celebrant to enjoy a triple hangover.
Later the Saturnalia was extended to five days and still later to a full week—and when we write "full" we mean full! A strong odor hung over the city for months afterward—and it was not that of sanctity.
During the Saturnalia the courts were closed. Thus no one was in

This was a tragedy in various respects. Since every finesse worked, North made an unbid slam, following the club 2 lead. North argued that he was not strong enough to leap to 5-Diamonds after hearing South's 3-Diamonds. South insisted that he had done enough bidding on his modest hand and could raise no further after North's 4-Diamonds.
Then West broke into it, "You got away with five finessses," he pointed out, "one in clubs, two in hearts and in spades two or perhaps three, if you want to count them as three. If I had my partner's holding in either spades or hearts, we would have taken two more tricks and you couldn't even have made a game, much less a slam."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—Final footnotes on the Bilbo fracas:

Now that it's all over, temporarily at least, a lot of sober, level-headed citizens about town whose love for Theodore G. Bilbo approximates their affection for a king cobra still are glad the man was not summarily booted out of the senate without having had a chance to speak his piece from the floor.

Their reasons are simple and well worth hearing.

They think it would have set a dangerous precedent for future perhaps high-handed barring of so-called "undesirable" senators from the land's most exclusive club.

They point out that, whatever the basic reasons behind the battle over Bilbo, it finally boiled down to a matter of political maneuvering and parliamentary expedient.

In other words, he finally could have been barred by the Republicans, simply and solely because they carried a majority. Which would mean that future senators could bar any single member of the minority party who happened at the moment to be under charges of some sort of misconduct—regardless of whether that member had been given public opportunity to defend himself!

It is all very well, in that regard, to point out that Bilbo was given opportunity to defend himself at the two special senate hearings which probed his activities. However, there is no denying that both of those committees could have conducted their hearings behind locked doors, had they so desired.

The fact that they were open hearings does not eliminate the possibility that if such committee reports can constitute basis for barring a senator, future senators might easily "investigate" and unseat a newly-elected member without the general public which elected him ever knowing on what grounds he was rejected.

Carry that possibility to its most unlikely extreme, and you can see where the majority party might eliminate its entire opposition in the highest legislative body in the land—and without publicly explaining a single reason why!

Unlikely? Yes. But still a dangerous precedent...

As the situation now stands, Mississippi's senior senator can return to defend himself from the senate floor—and you can rest assured that every newspaper and radio reporter in the gallery will see to it that his defense gets as much publicity as his prosecution...

Coincidentally, the strength of the nation's two-party system was demonstrated in an entirely different way during the temporary closing of the Bilbo case.

Although the newly-dominant Republicans led the fight against Bilbo, it was two Democrats who literally stole the show during the proceedings—Glen Taylor of Idaho and Alben Barkley of Kentucky.

It was Taylor who beat the Republicans to the punch in demanding that Bilbo be barred, thus preventing the battle from developing solely (did someone say "and sordidly?") along party lines. Even veteran senators who often have ridiculed the young westerner's brashness nodded approval of that particular move.

DIET AND HEALTH
Brain Hemorrhage Is A Serious Hazard of Birth

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
BIRTH presents a number of hazards, one of the gravest of which is brain hemorrhage. Just why such bleeding into the brain occurs, is not definitely known but it seems to develop most often in babies born before their time and in those instances where labor has been difficult.

If such a condition exists, it is of the utmost importance that it be recognized and treated promptly. The brain is not only the organ of the mind but also the great governor of all the body's physical activities and, hence, serious damage to the tissues of the brain may produce either mental or physical cripples. Of course, the baby's nutrition must be kept up with the proper food, preferably breast milk.

Mary let go of the limb and took hold of Anne's hand as they started back to the house. Contact helped. When Mary was close to her, she loved her. When the child drew away from her and looked at her with Sheila's eyes—Anne broke the thought off sharply.

"Anne, in this the night I have liver?" Liver every other night was to Mary the most objectionable part of the strict diet she had been on ever since her illness.

"No, you had it last night."

"Thank you!"

"Why don't you let the boys say that?"

"I wish I was a boy. Anne, don't you wish I was a boy?"

Would she be less like Sheila, Anne wondered helplessly.

Anne wondered helplessly. Anne was awfully nice, but I like girls better."

"Philip says so too."

Anne remembered when he had said it, the night he first encountered Mary's jealousy. He had been so perturbed, so disgusted. What must he think of it in her?

The Bowman's, as Anne had predicted, took charge of Mary; or rather, Mr. Bowman did. He let her help him in the garden, and unlike Mr. Lane, he was not particular as to the quality of the help. Exercise in the open was what she needed; she bloomed under it and put on weight, and Anne, relieved of the constant effort to keep her occupied and tractable, put on weight herself.

But Mary was still spoiled from her recent sickness, still expected to have her own way.

Anne went in search of her one warm afternoon and found her sitting in the grass watching Mr. Bowman put the finishing touches to a tower he had added to his castle principally for her amusement.

"Mother and I are going to drive over to town, Mary," Anne said. "Do you want to go with us?"

"Uh-huh."

"Come on in and get dressed then."

"I'm all right."

From the look of her overalls, she might have sat in the clay. "You're not only dirty, you're getting dirtier," Anne said. She waited a moment and then turned back to the house. "We're leaving in ten minutes. You'll have to be dressed if you want to go."

In ten minutes Anne and her mother got in the car and started down the drive. Mary ran across the lawn to meet them.

Anne slowed down. "You can't go that way."

"I'll get dressed."

"It's too late now. We have to go."

Anne drove on, leaving Mary, who managed to look both resentful and dejected, standing in the drive.

Mrs. Bowman said nothing. Anne, glancing at her, thought she understood the expression on her mother's face.

"I gave her plenty of time," she said defensively.

"Of course. You were quite right."

Anne thought determinedly that she would not discuss it; then she said, "But you wouldn't have done it. Is that it?"

"I wouldn't have with you. It's easier, of course, with another person's child."

"Mother!"

"Anne, I'm not criticizing you. I'm merely answering you. I said you were quite right, didn't I?"

"Yes, but—"

Anne sent her mind back into her childhood. What had her mother done when she failed to get ready for something? Did she leave her behind? Anne could not remember any instance of it. Instead, she could hear her mother calling, "Anne, if you don't hurry up we'll be late," and "Now, Anne, you see we're late, and it's all your fault."

But what was the difference? She would have done the thing her way with her own child. Or would she? That, she knew, was what her mother had meant. Not that there was anything wrong with the method, but merely that it was easy to follow it with a child who did not belong to you.

Her mother had been right about the jealousy; maybe she was right about this too. Little confidence as she had in her mother's judgment, Anne felt compelled to ask her advice.

"I do the best I can with Mary," she said appealingly. "What do you think I ought to do?"

"Just the opposite to what I think a mother should do," Mrs. Bowman answered promptly. "A mother should always be just a little more strict than she wants to be, a stepmother just a little less."

One thing, Anne thought, her mother always had a complete answer. "You think I should have waited for her?"

"Oh, I don't know. All I know is, I would have waited for you, and I can't see that it hurt you any."

Anne knew that she had not been anything like Mary. "Mary's different," she said. "You can't let her get away with things like that."

"That's what I mean. You think Mary is different, more difficult than most children. That's the stepmother complex."

Stepmother complex? Anne felt a dull shock. Was that all it was? Was she really trying to teach Mary to be self-reliant, or was she simply finding it easy to be strict with another person's child?

"I won't," Anne said to herself. "I won't."

Just what she wouldn't do was not very clear in her own mind, but the revision was strong.

When they were ready to start home, Mrs. Bowman said, "Let's take Mary something. She can't have any candy, I suppose, but we could get her something to play with."

Anne started to protest. Philip particularly wanted to keep in check what he called Mary's "gimme complex," and presents were reserved for special occasions. Anne did not feel equal to explaining all that to her mother now, however, and she assented listlessly.

She had come to a decision. She would give up this struggle to be a conscientious mother. Why should she torment herself with wondering if she were fair, if she were considering Mary's welfare, or her own convenience, whether she were teaching Mary, or relieving her own feelings? After all, Philip was perfectly capable of bringing Mary up. Anne could look after her as Mrs. Lane had done, but when there was any doubt in her mind as to the right course, she would leave the decision to Philip.

Though some doubt as to the wisdom of this particular decision did lurk in one corner of her mind, Anne was conscious of a great relief. She felt free and natural for the first time since she had made the return to Mary that she wished she did live with Sheila. There would be no more of that; there would be no more occasion for it. She and Mary would be friends; that would be all. No motions; no tension.

Funny how an impractical sentimentalist like her mother could have been right!

"The Authority on Authorities"

IMAGINATION VALUABLE
"IMAGINATION is absolutely necessary to reach some of the best No Trump game contracts."

That statement was repeated time and again by Gratz M. Scott, first general manager of the famous Cavendish Club in New York, whose words are still remembered years after he passed on to that Club where you eventually meet all your good friends again. He constantly helped younger players to recognize those situations in which you should count on your partner to have stoppers in some unbid suit.

Pointed out, "one in clubs, two in hearts and in spades two or perhaps three, if you want to count them as three. If I had my partner's holding in either spades or hearts, we would have taken two more tricks and you couldn't even have made a game, much less a slam."

East chimed in then. "What's the matter with the imagination of you fellows?" he asked. "South should have counted on North to have clubs probably stopped and should have called 2-No Trumps instead of 3-Diamonds, and North should have raised to 3-No Trumps. But after his 3-Diamonds, North should have counted on South to stop hearts and should have bid 3-No Trumps. Good imagination would tell you that either surmise would have been logical in view of what else the bidder held. Note that if either hearts or spades broke well, the No Trump game was sure, whereas both suits had to break for a diamond game to be made."

Inside WASHINGTON

President Truman Has
"Employment" Problem

Plenty of Democrats
Looking for New Jobs

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—As though President Truman doesn't have enough trouble, he's got a "full employment" problem of his own.

That is, he has to find jobs for the Democrats who find themselves on the outside looking in after the last election. And most senators and representatives, having been in the habit of telling the executive departments what to do and how to do it for years, don't want just any job. It has to be good.

So, almost every day, the president's calling list shows a few visitors who won't have "Rep." or "Sen." in front of their names much longer and who would like to have something else to put there.

That doesn't mean, of course, that all the Democrats who were not returned to office are looking for jobs. Many say they are not and mean it. But for men who spent their lives in politics, more politics, or at least government, is the logical thing.

Occupying the top spot on the list, according to most observers, is Senator James M. Mead of New York, who put his head on the New York gubernatorial chopping block for Tom Dewey and is so considered to have made the biggest sacrifice for the party. Mead is an old friend of the president, and the story goes that Mr. Truman would like to give him Robert Hannegan's job—postmaster-general and chairman of the Democratic National committee.

But Hannegan, while he would like to get rid of the committee post, because of ill health, among other things, wants to stay in the cabinet. And Mead is said to be almost insistent on cabinet rank. What may happen is the assignment of Mead as undersecretary of labor (Keeen Johnson, who has the job, is anxious to go back to being vice president of Reynolds Metals). Then, conceivably, Lewis Schwellenbach, who hasn't been happy as secretary, would step out and Mead would step in. The only flaw in this picture is that Mr. Truman might have to find Schwellenbach another job before he stepped out. Schwellenbach, like Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, has his eye on a judgeship, preferably on the supreme court. Mr. Truman, it is plain, is confronted with a vicious circle.

There is also a chance that Mead will get an ambassadorship, if one can be found for which extreme wealth is not essential.

One ambassadorship which will be open is that to the Philippines, from which Paul McNutt is expected to resign this month. It has been turned down by Wisconsin Progressive Robert La Follette, whose name has come up in connection with many openings, but who may become the American member of the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

These are some of the other men for whom the political dopsters are busily finding spots: Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio, who saw the president recently but disclaimed interest in a federal appointment; Senator Hugh Mitchell of Washington; Senator Abe Murdock of Utah, another White House caller; Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, likewise; Enos Axtell, who had White House backing in his unsuccessful Missouri race for Congress; Gov. Robert Kerr of Oklahoma; Senator James Huffman of Ohio; Attorney-general Robert Kenny of California, and Sen. James Tunnell of Delaware.

Want more? Rep. Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas of Illinois and Rep. Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse of Connecticut; Rep. Frank Hook of Michigan, who has been through this sort of thing before, having worked in the federal security agency the last time he was unseated; Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago; former Gov. Murray Van Wagoner of Michigan (he doesn't want anything); Sen. Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania (neither does he); James A. Farley, who doesn't want to return as chairman of the Democratic National committee, but who would like a job that might lead to the vice presidency.

SPECULATION ON STAFF CHANGES IS WIDESPREAD

Many Of Byrnes Aides Are Very Well Known In World Capitals

BY J. C. OESTREICHER
INS Foreign Editor

The original flurry of excitement over the resignation of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has died down at last and "old hands" in the word capitals speculated and wondered today how protocols and personalities may be changed under the regime of Gen. George C. Marshall.

Many of the lesser men attached to Byrnes, and before him to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, were more than usually familiar figures in European capitals.

They paved the way for the chief of department in all matters from relations with news men and obtaining hotel accommodations to liaison with the highest personalities abroad.

And it was inevitable that in the long years of war conferences in the days of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and during the manifold peace talks which followed these "contact men" played increasingly important roles.

From the viewpoint of news and radio correspondents assigned to the orbits of the world's great, there is real concern as to whether Charles E. Bohlen is to remain in Marshall's entourage.

Tall, good-looking and extremely personable, Bohlen has been the shield and buckler of the state department in foreign relations on countless occasions.

"Chip", as he is known to everyone, is one of the department's chief experts on Russia. But he knows Paris like the inside of his passport, and also is quite at home in Whitehall, on Piccadilly, the Corso Umberto in Rome and the promenade Des Anglais at Nice.

Another familiar personality of the Byrnes regime was his political adviser—serious, erudite and quick-minded Benjamin V. Cohen.

When asked a question—and reporters always have to ask many—Cohen always had the correct answer, off the record or in confidence, and between him and correspondents there always was mutual trust.

Another topic of conversation in this vast and significant American governmental change is that the United States will sit in on the Barch big four meeting in Moscow uniformed to the eyes.

Marshall is, of course, a five-star general. His ambassador to Moscow is Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, and the immediate superior of both is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. The United States Army will be well represented indeed at this vital conference to make a peace treaty for Germany.

GEN. MARSHALL INSISTS HE IS EPISCOPALIAN

HONOLULU, Jan. 9—Gen. George C. Marshall arrived at Hickam field, Honolulu, today but declined to comment on his appointment as secretary of state.

He was warmly greeted by his wife, who has been spending the Winter in Hawaii.

When asked if he considered himself a Democrat as the result of his appointment to President Truman's cabinet, the general replied with a chuckle:

"I am an Army officer and an Episcopalian."

Newsmen at Honolulu wryly recalled Marshall's comment when he passed through Hawaii enroute on various charges. He claimed also that only 21 peasant party candidates were being permitted to run in Poland's 52 constituencies.

to his assignment in China as President Truman's special "peace envoy." At that time his only statement was:

"I like Hawaiian weather."

Gen. Marshall arrived at Hickam field after a 20-hour flight from Guam.

Some concern was felt during the last hour of the flight because of poor radio contact between Hickam field and the general's plane.

SPECULATION ON STAFF CHANGES IS WIDESPREAD

Many of Byrnes Aides Are Very Well Known In World Capitals

BY J. C. OESTREICHER
INS Foreign Editor

The original flurry of excitement over the resignation of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has died down at last and "old hands" in the word capitals speculated and wondered today how protocols and personalities may be changed under the regime of Gen. George C. Marshall.

Many of the lesser men attached to Byrnes, and before him to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, were more than usually familiar figures in European capitals.

They paved the way for the chief of department in all matters from relations with news men and obtaining hotel accommodations to liaison with the highest personalities abroad.

And it was inevitable that in the long years of war conferences in the days of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and during the manifold peace talks which followed these "contact men" played increasingly important roles.

From the viewpoint of news and radio correspondents assigned to the orbits of the world's great, there is real concern as to whether Charles E. Bohlen is to remain in Marshall's entourage.

Tall, good-looking and extremely personable, Bohlen has been the shield and buckler of the state department in foreign relations on countless occasions.

"Chip," as he is known to everyone, is one of the department's chief experts on Russia. But he knows Paris like the inside of his passport, and also is quite at home in Whitehall, on Piccadilly, the Corso Umberto in Rome and the promenade Des Anglais at Nice.

Another familiar personality of the Byrnes regime was his political adviser—serious, erudite and quick-minded Benjamin V. Cohen.

When asked a question—and reporters always have to ask many—Cohen always had the correct answer, off the record or in confidence, and between him and correspondents there always was mutual trust.

Another topic of conversation in this vast and significant American governmental change is that the United States will sit in on the Barch big four meeting in Moscow uniformed to the eyes.

Marshall is, of course, a five-star general. His ambassador to Moscow is Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, and the immediate superior of both is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. The United States Army will be well represented indeed at this vital conference to make a peace treaty for Germany.

PEASANT PARTY TO TAKE PART IN POLE VOTING

WARSAW, Jan. 9.—The Polish peasant party, chief opposition to the government democratic bloc, today abandoned plans for a threatened boycott and decided to participate in the Jan. 19 elections.

The decision came after a six-hour meeting of the central committee of the party which is led by Vice-Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk. The vote in favor of taking part was unanimous.

Party supporters, however, were called upon to stay away from the polls in 10 out of 52 election districts where the list of peasant party candidates has been rejected. Mikolajczyk charged that 110 peasant party candidates in the general election are held by police

HONOLULU, Jan. 9.—Gen. George C. Marshall arrived at Hickam field, Honolulu, today but declined to comment on his appointment as secretary of state.

He was warmly greeted by his wife, who has been spending the Winter in Hawaii.

When asked if he considered himself a Democrat as the result of his appointment to President Truman's cabinet, the general replied with a chuckle:

"I am an Army officer and an Episcopalian."

Newsmen at Honolulu wryly recalled Marshall's comment when he passed through Hawaii enroute on various charges. He claimed also that only 21 peasant party candidates were being permitted to run in Poland's 52 constituencies.

to his assignment in China as President Truman's special "peace envoy." At that time his only statement was:

"I like Hawaiian weather."

Gen. Marshall arrived at Hickam field after a 20-hour flight from Guam.

Some concern was felt during the last hour of the flight because of poor radio contact between Hickam field and the general's plane.

CLOSE GAME IS ANTICIPATED BY TIGERS FRIDAY

'Screw' SCO Race Continues With CHS Team In Action At Hillsboro

Circleville high school Tigers will jump back into the South Central Ohio league race Friday night at Hillsboro while five Pickaway county league games entertain local basketball fans.

Hillsboro has been having as much trouble as the Tigers in winning league games and Friday's contest should be quite a battle. Anything may happen if games this week follow the "screw" pattern of those played to date.

A glance at past records show these happenings: Chillicothe trounced Circleville; Washington C. H. lost to Chillicothe by four points; Circleville defeated Washington C. H. by five points; Wilmington beat Circleville by 11 points; Washington beat Wilmington, etc.

Last week Hillsboro lost to Chillicothe by a huge score and Friday's CHS-HHS game should be fairly even, but...

CHS reserves will be seeking their fifth straight league victory. The little Tigers top the reserve standings with four victories and no defeats. Their margin of victory is always small but they manage to head off opposition rallies just in time.

For fans who like their basketball in their home county, Walnut plays at Pickaway; New Holland at Monroe; Ashville at Scioto; Washington at Darby; Jackson at Perry.

The Pickaway-Walnut and New Holland-Monroe games are attracting the most attention. Washington and Darby are expected to stage a thriller because neither has won in league play to date.

CORNHILL SAYS UPSET POSSIBLE

'Most Likely Upset' Is Now Included In County Cage League Predictions

Jim Cornhill, New Holland "finger filbert" who uses his statistics to pick Pickaway county basketball league winners, this week comes up with some new ideas.

This Friday he says the best game will be the Pickaway-Walnut contest at Pickaway; the most exciting the Washington-Darby game at Darby and the most likely upset is New Holland by Monroe.

Using his figures to predict final scores, Cornhill makes these predictions for Friday night games:

New Holland 40, Monroe 27.
Ashville 45, Scioto 18.
Pickaway 33, Walnut 31.
Washington 41, Darby 38.
Perry 41, Jackson 19.

Last week Cornhill says he failed to give enough advantage to the home teams. He missed last week's scores something like this: five points at Walnut; 20 at Perry; 11 at Saltcreek; 11 at Williamsport; 27 at Jackson and 32 at Ashville.

BAROUDI MOVES UP

AKRON, O., Jan. 9 — Akron's Sammy Baroudi stepped closer today to a shot at Tony Zale's mid-dleweight boxing crown following his 10 round kayo over New Yorker Buddy Farrell last night in Akron. Baroudi, leading all the way, finally put the finishing touch on Farrell in the final round of their scheduled 10-frame affair. A crowd of 1,873 spectators paid $3,880 to watch the former Akron amateur star toy with his inexperienced foe.

BOWLER SCORES 'STRIKE', HITS MAN IN BACK

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9 — An overzealous bowler today was credited with a "one-in-a-million" shot.

The ball bounced out of the alley, through a window, and smacked a pedestrian in the back, six floors below.

The victim, Joseph Gorman, told police he was leaning over to pick up a coin when "whambo" — an aching back.

Bowling Scores

Walt Zahard had a 211 game and 576 total to pace Wednesday night league bowlers at Roll and Bowl. Roy Beatty was right behind with 574.

John Deere won two games from Kiwanis No. 2; Isaly's won twice from Gordon Auto Parts; Elks No. 2 blanked Kiwanis No. 1; Jaycees took two games from Ford; Crites Oil margined Legion twice and Post Office shut out Rotary.

Clock-Stopping Rule Is Slated For Discard

BY JOHN BARRINGTON
INS Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 8 — Scrambled scribbles from the sports samovar... The "hot stove" season, baseball that is, has been enlivened by a four-way scramble for a single vacant Ohio State league franchise... Candidates for the spot relinquished by Middletown are Mansfield, Portsmouth, Charleston, W. Va., and Muncie, Ind....

Charleston and Muncie have big league backing from the Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Browns, respectively... Mansfield's bid was made by Al Hamberg, Marion jeweler... Portsmouth, incidentally, has more than one string to its bow... The river city also is angling for a pot in a Class C circuit of Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia cities...

One of the toughest high school athletic circuits in the state, the Greater Ohio League, was strengthened recently by the re-entry of Portsmouth... The Trojans withdrew a year ago because the loop didn't play a football schedule... now the members plan to recognize a grid champion, however, with the proviso that each school must play three family games...

Members of that league are Middletown, Hamilton, Springfield, Monroe, Lima South and Lima Central... really a group of names to respect... The league produced the 1945-46 class A basketball champion, Middletown, and one of the outstanding undefeated 1946 football teams, Lima Central...

One basketball innovation that is fairly certain not to be around come another season is the rule stopping the clock whenever the ball goes out of bounds during the last four minutes... The regulation was designed to stop late moment stalling, but it backfired... From everywhere come laments that the game is slowed up more than ever...

CLOSE GAME IS ANTICIPATED BY TIGERS FRIDAY

'Screw' SCO Race Continues With CHS Team In Action At Hillsboro

Circleville high school Tigers will jump back into the South Central Ohio league race Friday night at Hillsboro while five Pickaway county league games entertain local basketball fans.

Hillsboro has been having as much trouble as the Tigers in winning league games and Friday's contest should be quite a battle. Anything may happen if games this week follow the "screw" pattern of those played to date.

A glance at past records show these happenings: Chillicothe trounced Circleville; Washington C. H. lost to Chillicothe by four points; Circleville defeated Washington C. H. by five points; Wilmington beat Circleville by 11 points; Washington beat Wilmington, etc.

Last week Hillsboro lost to Chillicothe by a huge score and Friday's CHS-HHS game should be fairly even, but...

CHS reserves will be seeking their fifth straight league victory. The little Tigers top the reserve standings with four victories and no defeats. Their margin of victory is always small but they manage to head off opposition rallies just in time.

For fans who like their basketball in their home county, Walnut plays at Pickaway; New Holland at Monroe; Ashville at Scioto; Washington at Darby; Jackson at Perry.

The Pickaway-Walnut and New Holland-Monroe games are attracting the most attention. Washington and Darby are expected to stage a thriller because neither has won in league play to date.

CORNHILL SAYS UPSET POSSIBLE

'Most Likely Upset' Is Now Included In County Cage League Predictions

Jim Cornhill, New Holland "finger filbert" who uses his statistics to pick Pickaway county basketball league winners, this week comes up with some new ideas.

This Friday he says the best game will be the Pickaway-Walnut contest at Pickaway; the most exciting the Washington-Darby game at Darby and the most likely upset is New Holland by Monroe.

Using his figures to predict final scores, Cornhill makes these predictions for Friday night games:

New Holland 40, Monroe 27.
Ashville 45, Scioto 18.
Pickaway 33, Walnut 31.
Washington 41, Darby 38.
Perry 41, Jackson 19.

Last week Cornhill says he failed to give enough advantage to the home teams. He missed last week's scores something like this: five points at Walnut; 20 at Perry; 11 at Salt Creek; 11 at Williamsport; 27 at Jackson and 32 at Ashville.

BAROUDI MOVES UP

AKRON, O., Jan. 9 — Akron's Sammy Baroudi stepped closer today to a shot at Tony Zale's midweight boxing crown following his 10 round kayo over New Yorker Buddy Farrell last night in Akron. Baroudi, leading all the way, finally put the finishing touch on Farrell in the final round of their scheduled 10-frame affair. A crowd of 1,873 spectators paid $3,890 to watch the former Akron amateur star toy with his inexperienced foe.

BOWLER SCORES 'STRIKE', HITS MAN IN BACK

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9 — An overzealous bowler today was credited with a "one-in-a-million" shot.

The ball bounced out of the alley, through a window, and smacked a pedestrian in the back, six floors below.

The victim, Joseph Gorman, told police he was leaning over to pick up a coin when "whambo" — an aching back.

Bowling Scores

Walt Zahard had a 211 game and 576 total to pace Wednesday night league bowlers at Roll and Bowl. Roy Beatty was right behind with 574.

John Deere won two games from Kiwanis No. 2; Isaly's won twice from Gordon Auto Parts; Elks No. 2 blanked Kiwanis No. 1; Jaycees took two games from Ford; Crites Oil margined Legion twice and Post Office shut out Rotary.

Clock-Stopping Rule Is Slated For Discard

BY JOHN BARRINGTON
INS Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 8 — Scrambled scribbles from the sports samovar... The "hot stove" season, baseball that is, has been enlivened by a four-way scramble for a single vacant Ohio State league franchise... Candidates for the spot relinquished by Middletown are Mansfield, Portsmouth, Charleston, W. Va., and Muncie, Ind....

Charleston and Muncie have big league backing from the Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Browns, respectively... Mansfield's bid was made by Al Hamberg, Marion Jeweler... Portsmouth, incidentally, has more than one string to its bow... The river city also is angling for a pot in a Class C circuit of Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia cities...

One of the toughest high school athletic circuits in the state, the Greater Ohio League, was strengthened recently by the re-entry of Portsmouth... The Trojans withdrew a year ago because the loop didn't play a football schedule... now the members plan to recognize a grid champion, however, with the proviso that each school must play three family games...

Members of that league are Middletown, Hamilton, Springfield, Monroe, Lima South and Lima Central... really a group of names to respect... The league produced the 1945-46 class A basketball champion, Middletown, and one of the outstanding undefeated 1946 football teams, Lima Central...

One basketball innovation that is fairly certain not to be around come another season is the rule stopping the clock whenever the ball goes out of bounds during the last four minutes... The regulation was designed to stop late moment stalling, but it backfired... From everywhere came laments that the game is slowed up more than ever...

The first Ohio American Legion basketball game was played last night at the Columbus Athletic Club... The game was a close one, with the home team winning by a narrow margin...

CITY FIRE LOSS $24,840 DURING YEAR OF 1946

Chief Wise's Report Does
Not Include Jones Home
Damage; 151 Calls

Annual report of Fire Chief Talmer Wise, which was approved by unanimous vote of the city council Tuesday night, says that during 1946 the estimated fire losses in Circleville totaled $24,840.

However, that total does not include, Chief Wise explained, an estimated $20,000 loss caused by fire which badly damaged the home of Mrs. Howard Jones in Park Place, on Dec. 2.

Chief Wise's report lists 110 city calls and 41 rural calls, a total of 151 last year. That total includes 3 false alarms, 4 calls to unlock doors, 4 inhalator calls, 1 to rescue a boy from a tree, 3 to wash gasoline from streets, 2 explosions, and 1 drowning.

The report further says that the losses in rural fires were not estimated and that 3 persons died in fires in 1946.

CITY FIRE LOSS $24,840 DURING YEAR OF 1946

Chief Wise's Report Does
Not Include Jones Home
Damage; 151 Calls

Annual report of Fire Chief Talmer Wise, which was approved by unanimous vote of the city council Tuesday night, says that during 1946 the estimated fire losses in Cincinnati totaled $24,840.

However, that total does not include, Chief Wise explained, an estimated $20,000 loss caused by fire which badly damaged the home of Mrs. Howard Jones in Park Place, on Dec. 2.

Chief Wise's report lists 110 city calls and 41 rural calls, a total of 151 last year. That total includes 3 false alarms, 4 calls to unlock doors, 4 inhalator calls, 1 to rescue a boy from a tree, 3 to wash gasoline from streets, 2 explosions, and 1 drowning.

The report further says that the losses in rural fires were not estimated and that 3 persons died in fires in 1946.
